Membership is open to all persons passionate about the livestock industry

WCLA
The voice of the livestock producers in Weld County

helps guide policy on a local, state and national level that protects the foundations and values that the west was built on.
It promotes the raising and selling of all types of livestock.

The Weld County Livestock Association has a Board of Directors, serving three year terms. Officers are elected annually.
Board meetings are held on the second Thursday of each month. Meetings are always open to members and any other interested persons. Members may be individuals, partnerships or businesses.

The WCLA has implemented a Junior membership program. Young people 8 to 18 years of age are encouraged to become members and will participate in various field trips and take part in educational opportunities, geared towards the livestock industry.
